BIG TEUTON ARMY ASSEMBLING AT SALONIKI

Anglo-French Sending More Troops Near the City

ATTITUDE OF GREECE A PUZZLE

Christmas Observed by Continuous Boom of Artillery on Western Front.

London, Dec. 27.—With the Germans assembling a large army for action against the entente forces in front of Salonika and large masses of Bulgarian troops still remaining on Serbian soil, the undetermined attitude of Greece makes it uncertain as to what the next move will be in the Balkan campaign.

Meanwhile the British and French are adding to their strength around Salonika in men, guns and defenses. Without the Bulgarians, a British correspondent at Salonika says, the Germans will not attack, and Greece has been strongly opposed all along to Bulgarian troops entering her territory.

It is also reported from Athens that King Constantine does not desire to make a change in his ministry until the chamber reassembles the last of January and that therefore the present cabinet will remain in power, and it is possible that the new chamber may be convoked before that date.

Christmas passed quietly on the French front, with the men on both sides standing by their guns in fear of a sudden movement to sweep forward. The artillery never ceased to boom at one point or another, but no general offensive was undertaken. A Paris dispatch says that in the heavy fighting a few days before Christmas, between Ypres and Arras, the Germans sustained a loss of more than 8000 men without gaining ground.

An intense artillery action has been in progress on the Austro-Italian front, although there has been no change in the positions there. From Russia comes word of comparative quiet.

The Turkish war office reports that the British forces at Kut-el-Amara in Mesopotamia are being surrounded, but the British commander, Gen. Townshend, reports that, while his forces have been under artillery and rifle fire, no attempt at assault has been made.

CARROLL-COOK

Pretty Wedding Christmas Eve at Home of Luman Cook.

The home of Luman Cook was the scene of a pretty wedding Christmas Eve when his daughter Marian Ernestine was given in marriage to Charles Stuart Carroll of Columbus, Ohio. The house was decorated with Christmas greens from Mr. Carroll's old home at Indian Lake, N. Y.

At six o'clock the orchestra began the wedding march and the bridal party appeared. Miss Cook on the arm of her father was preceded by her bridesmaid, Grace Mae Cook. Mr. Carroll was attended by his brother, Herbert F. Carroll of the Albany Medical College. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Alfred Spencer Davis who used the single ring service.

The bride was gowned in white crepe de chene with a veil and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

Her going away suit was dark blue with hat to match.

The maid of honor wore blue silk and carried Killarney roses.

The couple left town shortly after seven en route for Washington, D. C. where they will spend their honeymoon. Mr. and Mrs. Carroll will make their home in Columbus, Ohio.

Mrs. Carroll is a graduate of Hillcrest hospital and has been a very popular nurse in Bennington for past three years. Mr. Carroll, who was graduated from the R. P. I. of Troy in the class of 1912, is a member of the faculty of the Ohio State University of Columbus, Ohio.

Among the guests from out of town were Mrs. N. M. Goodrich, Mr. and Mrs. Tebbits Northrup, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Walker and Miss Mildred Walker of North Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Goodrich, Mrs. Harry Torrey, Mrs. Nelly Torrey of Williamstown, Mass., and Mrs. Harry Perrey and Master Wilbur Perrey of Burlington.

PLAYS ENTENTE POWERS

Greek Premier Says Allies Have Angered His People.

London, Dec. 23.—The Daily Chronicle's Athens correspondent under date of Sunday sends an interview with the Greek premier, M. Skouloudis, involving the strongest criticism of the diplomacy of the quadruple entente powers in the Balkans. The Greek premier complained bitterly that his country had been maligned and his government attacked.

"But," M. Skouloudis is quoted as having said, "the fault was not ours. We tried to play the game, as you English say, and if we failed it is the entente, not we, who are responsible. Declaring with emotion that he had earnestly tried to see eye to eye with the entente powers and to avert blood shed in Macedonia, M. Skouloudis said:

"The allies have flouted and angered Greece, instead of placating her. Instead of dealing openly with us they coqueted with Bulgaria, while treating us disdainfully. The result is that they have fallen between two stools. If the allies had come forth frankly to Greece and asked her aid, and told her that she could count on a clearly defined recompense at the end of the struggle, I affirm that Greece would not have hesitated for a single moment."

"Instead of this England and France began by demanding sacrifices from Greece. We were asked to co-operate in the Dardanelles, and at the same time to relinquish Kavala and Seres to our bitterest foes; to give up, in fact, our richest provinces which had been won by Greek blood."

"We were free to shed our blood in an attempt to force the Dardanelles, but we were warned that on no account must we dream of marching to Constantinople in the event of an allied success. In fact, it was expressly forbidden in the event of our success for the Greeks to show their national flag within fifty miles of the ancient Byzantine capital."

Remarking that the Greeks had not forgotten Gladstone and Great Britain's noble labors in the past in behalf of Greece, Premier Skouloudis continued:

"You have bullied us and we turned the other cheek uncomplainingly. We honestly sought to aid you, and professed you aid which you rejected."

Stating that the Greek staff had offered a plan by which the Dardanelles might have been forced, but that the allies refused the advice, Premier Skouloudis contended that in allowing the entente allies to come to Salonika Greece had gone to the utmost limits of friendship, but had been treated with such humiliation in turn that she had been almost goaded into hostilities against the entente.

Coming to the existing situation, with the possibility of an Austro-German and perhaps a Bulgarian invasion, the premier concluded:

"So, as I see it, Greece is to be ravaged by a cruel, relentless war because the entente allies have badly blundered in a diplomatic as well as a military sense."

WILD SNOWSTORM SPECTACULAR BUT BRIEF

Rain, Wind, Hail and Snow Did Little Danger Here

LOSS IN MANY OTHER PLACES

Warm Wind Saturday Night Started Snow in Mountains But Cold Wave Checked Flood.

The storm of Saturday night and Sunday morning was severe for a few hours, but the hard part was so short that it caused little discomfort or damage.

Early Saturday evening a warm wind from the southeast started the snow in the mountains and as the wind continued all night the water situation was growing serious early Sunday morning when a heavy rain-fall reinforced the melting snow.

Furnace brook was over its banks Sunday morning at several points and the highway was under water on the flats. Billy Seaton's house was exposed, but withstood the flood. The storm was a typical southeaster which are ordinarily the most violent in this section.

Shortly after 8 o'clock Sunday morning the wind veered to the north and gradually around to the northwest and the rain changed to hail and then to snow. For about two hours the snow and hail made a bluff at a big storm, but toward noon the weather cleared. Not over three inches of snow fell, but the wind drifted it in places so that roads and walks had to be plowed.

Conditions were such during the rain storm which preceded the snow that water found its way into many cellars throughout the village, some of which had been dry during many previous years. The worst instance of flooding was in the basement of the postoffice. Postmaster Harris at first believed that a pipe had burst, but when the Village Clerk W. P. Hogan and Superintendent John Mahan had been summoned and the gate closed it was found that the water came from the surface and that it was following the pipe.

Pittsfield, Dec. 27.—Two women are dead here tonight as a result of the severe snow and wind storm which caused more damage in Pittsfield and the Berkshires than the heavy snowstorm of December 13-14.

Miss Gullienne Rabean, fifty-five years old, died while returning from Notre Dame church this morning when the wind literally blew the breath out of her body, and Mrs. Irene Brown, fifty-three years old, 247 Bradford building died while running for a trolley car when the exertion of battling against the heavy wind overtaxed her heart.

Trolley traffic was hampered throughout the Berkshires by the storm, while the trains on the Boston and Maine and Boston and Albany lines are creeping along hours behind schedule. Local trolley officials fought against the storm all day in a partly successful effort to prevent cars stalling. Telephone officials report 250 telephone lines out of order.

PERSIAN CABINET FALLS

New Premier Named—Considered Victory of Allies.

"The Persian cabinet has fallen," says the Teheran correspondent of Reuters telegraph company at London. "Prince Firman Firma has been nominated premier by the shah. This is considered a great diplomatic victory for the entente allies." Prince Firman Firma was appointed a member of the Persian cabinet in November. A news dispatch at that time said the prince was considered Russophile.

In 24 hours," replied the French general, "when the emperor shall have given sepulture to his thousands of dead, we shall be ready for him again."

An estimated proportion of three Germans to one Frenchman buried in the battlefields of the Grand Couronne de Nancy, extending in a semicircle from Gerbevillers to Pont-a-Mousson on the east bank of the Moselle, naturally takes no account of Bavarian dead removed at night by rail toward Metz, after the battle of Sainte Genevieve, which decided the issue of the struggle for Nancy; nor does it comprise the heavy death toll of the French in annexed Lorraine, just over the frontier, in the disaster of Morhange.

The evidence of those who have visited all the battlefields of Lorraine and those who helped pick up the dead after the battle of Nancy tends to the belief that taking the French dead in German Lorraine and the German dead carried from the field of battle, there is no exaggeration in the estimate of three Germans to one Frenchman as the proportion of those killed in the operations in the attack and defense of Nancy.

Pious hands are caring for these by fronting a German headstone cemeteries, even so close to the battle front that the German heavy art.

WORLD'S GREATEST CEMETERY

Colonies of Crosses Where Battle Raged in Lorraine.

French Lorraine is the greatest cemetery in the world. Colonies of dead, marked by lines of crude wooden crosses, lie everywhere under newly-formed sod at the edges of woods and thickets and in ravines. Germans and French. The shifting of battle scenes may be traced by following them. They are thickest there where was fought the great battle for Nancy that began with the retreat of the French from Morhange and reached its climax during the battle of the Marne. The number has been continually swelled since in the 14 months' struggle in the Woivre and the Vosges.

Saint Genevieve, Essey, the Amance, the heights of Cuittes, Velain, Gerbevillers of the Grand Couronne de Nancy, Etain, the Eparges, the Bois Brule, the Bois Apremont, the Bois Saint Mansuy, and the Bois Le Preire in the Woivre are so many cemeteries, nearly all of them with crosses bearing names already illustrious. Lionel Rieux, the poet, lies at Essey; Paul Vial, who received a bullet in his heart, in the St. Mansuy woods. Among the French buried at Gerbevillers is Jean Martin, one of the most promising pupils of the French art school at Rome; he fell with the heroic handful of chasseurs that held the Mortagne there against 40,444 Germans during the 11 hours. Marcel Drouot is among those who lie at the summit of the Samogneux hill.

The dead lie thickest perhaps at the Loisy gap. After the Germans had captured Nomeny and Pont-a-Mousson, they sent a regiment to force this passage between two heights, held by a single company of French infantry. That gap, became the tomb of the entire regiment. The cemetery of St. Genevieve is not so dense, but far more extended than that of the Loisy gap. The Germans forced by the resistance of the company of infantry at Loisy to try a flank movement around the heights of Sainte Genevieve, obtained a success before the heights of Cuittes, where French crosses predominate.

It was then, thinking he saw the route opening up for his troops, the emperor of Germany issued his famous order of the day: "Tomorrow in Nancy." Sainte Genevieve was still before his majesty's troops and the Lorraine capital; it is today the cemetery of most of them. The French, too, fell in such number there as to disquiet the officers, who called the attention of Commandant M. to the losses.

"No matter," replied the commandant "we won't give an inch." It required an order from the general to induce him to take up a stronger position little in the rear.

During the attacks upon the plateau of Amance, captured and retaken by Gen Dubail on the following day, Emperor William is said to have observed the action from the edge of the Morel woods, behind which were concealed the 10,000 horsemen of the Prussian guard—his escort into Nancy. Velaine fell and Uhlands and Bavarian infantry surged into the passage between the two heights of Amance.

"If we can hold out the day it will be a miracle," said the French general in command. The three-inchers increased their fire to the maximum speed just then, and moved those Uhlands and Bavarians down before they could debouch from the dottle; they lie there today in serried ranks over which a weedy sod has formed. The 10,000 cavalry of the guard galloped off toward Metz, and a parliamentarian with a white flag asked, "In the name of his majesty" for an armistice of 24 hours—to bury the dead.

"In 24 hours," replied the French general, "when the emperor shall have given sepulture to his thousands of dead, we shall be ready for him again."

An estimated proportion of three Germans to one Frenchman buried in the battlefields of the Grand Couronne de Nancy, extending in a semicircle from Gerbevillers to Pont-a-Mousson on the east bank of the Moselle, naturally takes no account of Bavarian dead removed at night by rail toward Metz, after the battle of Sainte Genevieve, which decided the issue of the struggle for Nancy; nor does it comprise the heavy death toll of the French in annexed Lorraine, just over the frontier, in the disaster of Morhange.

The evidence of those who have visited all the battlefields of Lorraine and those who helped pick up the dead after the battle of Nancy tends to the belief that taking the French dead in German Lorraine and the German dead carried from the field of battle, there is no exaggeration in the estimate of three Germans to one Frenchman as the proportion of those killed in the operations in the attack and defense of Nancy.

JOSEPH A. DEBOER DIED CHRISTMAS MORNING

Brilliant Vermonter Suffered for Year From Cancer

WAS HEAD OF NATIONAL LIFE

Native of Holland Rose Through His Own Efforts from Newsboy to Highest Rank in Business.

Montpelier, Dec. 26.—The Hon Joseph Arend DeBoer passed away at 6 o'clock Christmas morning, death following an illness from cancer of nearly a year's duration. He made his last public appearance during the session of the 1915 Legislature when he made a forceful address against the educational bill then pending, which measure was the result of the investigations of a special commission. He also nominated Mayor James M. Boutwell at the March election. Soon after he went to Brookline, Mass., where he underwent two operations and submitted to a third several weeks later. Since then he has gradually failed. Two weeks ago he had a sinking spell and his condition has been regarded as critical from that time until his death Saturday.

The funeral will be held at two o'clock Tuesday afternoon at Christ Episcopal church.

Joseph Arend DeBoer was born June 17, 1861, in Warfamin, Holland, the son of John Arend and Anna Peters (Kuiper) DeBoer. The family as far back as its lineage has been traced is pure Dutch. When Mr. DeBoer was four years old his father died. He was brought to the United States in 1867 by his mother, who remarried, and lived in Albany, N. Y. Young DeBoer became a newsboy and paper carrier, attending the grammar school and high school, from which he was graduated in 1880. Then he went to Dartmouth, and worked his way through college, graduating in 1884 with the degree of A. B. Dartmouth conferred upon him the honorary degrees of A. M. in 1887 and Sc. D. in 1905.

His superior gifts and qualifications as a teacher were immediately recognized and he was sought for the position of principal of the Montpelier Union school. For four years he was principal of the Montpelier Union and the Washington county grammar schools and made an enviable reputation as an educator.

In 1889 he became actuary in the National Life Insurance company, holding that office for 13 years. He was elected a director and secretary in 1897, second vice-president in charge of agency forces in 1900, vice-president in 1901 and president in 1902, which office he held to the time of his death.

He had repeatedly served as a delegate to county, district and State conventions, acting as chairman of the republican State convention in 1910. He was senator from Washington county in 1890 and representative from Montpelier in 1908.

He long and earnestly advocated reform in State taxation laws as fundamental to Vermont's progress and growth. He urged that practical policies must supply a system by which the desires of the people shall be expressed in well-digested platform principles, sustained by an election of representatives and senators who will enact such principles into law and of executives and judicial officers who will make them applicable to the business and prosperity of the people on equal terms.

He gave his time and his best effort whenever called upon by the State, county, or city, and in every instance the work was honestly, efficiently done, perpetual monuments to his name existing to testify thereto.

Mr. DeBoer was a 32nd degree Mason, a charter member of the Actuarial Society of America, member of the Kappa Kappa Kappa and Phi Beta Kappa, Dartmouth, Vermont Historical society the Apollo and Country clubs of Montpelier, and many other societies in the United States.

The family requests that no flowers be sent.

illery often rakes up the sod and sends the crosses flying in splinters. Flowers are planted on all the French graves and the tri-color floats over many of them. The graves of the Germans are sacredly protected, but not decorated.

Bookcases should not be placed against outside walls on account of the probable dampness.

SANG IN STREETS ON CHRISTMAS EVENING

Community Observance of Festival in Bennington

NEEDY CHILDREN REMEMBERED

Extensive Programs of Christmas Music Carried Out at the Churches.

Christmas was celebrated in all its joy and beauty in Bennington. At the churches the Christmas music was of the usual high standard and in Bennington homes the festival never came under better conditions. Nearly all are prosperous and those who are not were generously remembered.

It is of the work in aiding those not favorites of fortune that Bennington has most reason to congratulate its people. That and the Community Christmas exercises on the streets and at the Putnam square were the distinctive features of the Yuletide here.

The Civic league maintained its reputation as the most useful organization in Bennington both for its efforts to stir up the people to do their duty by the poor and needy, and for its creditable work in arranging the outdoor program for the afternoon of Christmas day which beautiful custom from the older countries adds so much to the spirit of Christmas.

The various choirs and carollers visited the various streets of the village and sang before the houses marked by candles where there were people shut in by illness. The only parts of the village missed were West Main, Washington and Elm streets and vicinity which were assigned to the St. Francis deSales choir which failed to appear for the occasion.

Following their visit to the "shut-ins" the carollers were served with hot chocolate at Library hall and then gathered at the Putnam square where carols were sung by the combined chorus under the direction of Frank Hurley. The streets were crowded, over 2000 people being gathered to enjoy the program. At the last moment a burned out fuse cut out the electric lights and it was an hour before they were restored.

From Grand Army hall pictures were thrown on a screen on the plaza of the Putnam house.

One of the most charming features of Christmas was the spruce trees which were placed along Main street. These were secured and placed by Street Commissioner E. S. Buss.

The committee of the Civic League in charge of the out door exercise was composed of Miss Martha Pratt, Mrs. Mary Adams, Mrs. William H. Wills, Miss Eunice Lyons, and Miss Bridget McGuire.

OLDMAN-SLADE

Marriage at Baptist Church Parsonage Christmas Eve.

LeRoy S. Oldham and Miss Nora Slade were united in marriage at the Baptist Parsonage Friday evening by Rev. W. G. Towart, the couple being attended by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cran dall. Both bride and groom are well-known in the village, being employed by the Bottom & Torrance Company.

After the wedding a reception was given to relatives and friends at the home of the bride's parents on County street.

Following a brief wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Oldham will reside at the home of the bride's parents.
